Perrigo Company Licenses Prescription Brands to Medimetrics Pharmaceuticals

Medimetrics Adds Centany® (mupirocin ointment, 2%) and Two New Brands to Dermatology and Podiatry Product Portfolio

FAIRFIELD, NJ –October 28, 2008 – Medimetrics Pharmaceuticals announced today that the Company entered into a licensing agreement with Perrigo Company (NASDAQ: PRGO) for the U.S. marketing rights to Centany® Ointment and two prescription keratolytic brands. Patented through 2018, Centany® represents an important step in Medimetrics' plan to commercialize patent-protected therapies for the Dermatology and Podiatry markets that offer important patient benefits. Medimetrics plans to launch Centany® in early 2009, with the two additional products following shortly thereafter.

Previously marketed by Johnson & Johnson's OrthoNeutrogena professional division, Centany® is indicated for the topical treatment of impetigo due to Staphylococcus aureus and Streptococcus pyogenes, and will compete in a topical antibiotic market that exceeds $150 million. Centany® received a New Drug Approval in December of 2002 based in part on the unique properties of its vehicle, which offers important benefits over its competitors.

The two prescription keratolytic brands are urea-based therapies indicated for the treatment of severe dry skin. They are offered in delivery systems that are gaining wide acceptance in the Dermatology and Podiatry markets and are both patent pending. These new brands will compete in a skin softening market that approaches one million prescriptions annually.

"We are happy to have a partner that brings such a record of success in the branded pharmaceutical business," stated Sharon Kochan, Executive Vice President of Perrigo. "We believe the licensed products are in good hands given Medimetrics management's proven abilities in building a successful business in the Dermatology and Podiatry markets."

Medimetrics President and CEO, Bradley Glassman, commented, "We are pleased to add these prescription brands to our portfolio. Perrigo is known for developing high quality products and we believe these brands will benefit both our core Dermatology and Podiatry audiences and their patients."

Centany® is contraindicated in individuals with a history of sensitivity reactions to any of its components. The following local adverse reactions have been reported in connection with the use of Centany®: application site reactions and pruritus, each in 1% of patients; contact dermatitis and furunculosis, each in 0.7% of patients; and exfoliative dermatitis and rash, each in 0.3% of patients.
